

Deaf Identities in the Making: Local Lives, Transnational Connections

Introduction

DEAF-SAME and Difference in International Deaf Spaces and Encounters

Annelies Kusters and Michele Friedner

- Deaf people from all over the world attended the Paris World Fair in 1900. There, a French deaf leader remarked that deaf people around the world “know no borders.”
- Andrew Foster, an African American deaf pastor and educator, established more than thirty deaf schools in Africa. His methods inspired deaf Nigerians, who applied Foster’s strategies in their voluntary work projects with deaf people in Fiji.
- Expatriates and local Cambodians set up deaf tourism agencies in Cambodia. Previously, local deaf people acted as guides for foreign visitors informally and without financial compensation.
- A deaf American lawyer traveled through Chile and founded a non-governmental organization to support Chilean deaf advocacy efforts by providing legal services and training.
- Deaf youth from all over the world who attended the World Federation of the Deaf Youth Section camp in Durban commented on how the camp provided opportunities for learning, networking, and empowerment.
- A deaf person from Eritrea traveled to Sweden and was shocked to discover how similar her sign language is to Swedish Sign Language.

While the dynamics in each of these encounters between diverse deaf people around the world vary, they all involve deaf people meeting each other in ¹We write deaf with a lowercase “d” because we see deaf as more encompassing, less politicized, and less context-dependent than Deaf. As readers will note, the chapter authors have made different choices regarding use of deaf and Deaf.
